GROWING.

[A. F. Durham in Texas Siftings.]

Baby is only one year old,
Fair and sweet as a daffodilly;
Hair as bright as the crinkled gold
Hid in the heart of a water lily.

Baby is only two years old,
Tongue like a piping bob-o'-Lincoln,
Trills more songs than can e'er be told
Or ever a birdie would dare to think on.

Baby is only—wont's been stealing
Out of my arms and off my knee
My baby? The gypsy year came knocking,
And stole my baby away from me.

SAM HOUSTON AND BOOTH.

The Tragedian's Rehearsals and the General's Thrilling Responses.

[Inter Ocean.]

Gen. Sam Houston, who had just returned from his first visit to Texas, was walking up Pennsylvania avenue one evening in the winter of 1832, when he met with his old friend Booth, the tragedian. After mutual exclamations of surprise and salutation the two ascertained that they were both rooming at Browne's Indian Queen hotel, and going there they went to Booth's room. Sitting down, they recounted the adventures of their past lives, and as they industriously circulated the bottle many a loud shout echoed through that hall and startled the watchmen in the street as they went their silent rounds. As the night wore on their excitement increased until, at the close of a thrilling story relating to his strange career, Houston exclaimed:

"Now, Booth, let's have a speech to liberty, one of those apostrophes to old Roman freedom with which you startle audiences."

Had Booth been inclined to refuse, he knew that his friend, when the mood was on him, would not be denied any request, however absurd or difficult of performance. But the tragedian had himself entered into the spirit of his companion, and nothing loth he rehearsed with stage power many of those electric passages in defense of liberty with which the English language abounds. Houston, whose memory as well as his habits partook of the Indian character, caught up the words, and, with equal force, clearness and accuracy, went through each speech in regular succession. Thus they proceeded for a time, and then again sat down to renew their potations and the story of personal adventure. Houston drank and listened while the other told of his own elevation in his native state, of his disgust at civic honors, of his home in the distant forest, of the uncontrolled freedom of the red men, of their stoic fortitude and matchless heroism.

Warmed by the recollection of those thrilling scenes he sprang at last to his feet, and, in the tone of one amid the battle's din fighting against the most fearful odds, exclaimed: "Now, Booth, once more for liberty." The tragedian did not disobey. He ran through, with all his usual energy, the tale of Mexican thraldom of the oppressed colonists of that land, the dangers incurred by that army, their commander's exhortation before the battle and the stubborn bravery of the native chiefs. Before him stood at that lone hour, listening with keen intensity in thought and feeling, while [illegible] through his eyes lighted his face, strained every muscle and started the sweat in great drops from his lofty brow, one who had all the fiery spirit of a Cortez and ambition of a Pizarro. Quick as thought he took up the tale and repeated the words last uttered by Booth, with the most critical precision of tone and manner. As he became excited in the recitations his spirit seemed to take fire, and with an air so determined, so frightful that it seemed, the voice of one inspired, he exclaiming at the close of a masterly extemporaneous rhapsody:

"Yes! Yes! I am made to revel yet in the halls of the Montezumas."

"Coming events cast their shadows before," and although Houston did not revel in the halls of the Montezumas, his determination and energy of character conquered the occupants of those halls and wrested from Mexico her fairest state.

In Japan the [illegible] time [illegible] presents himself [illegible] a [illegible] upon tea is [illegible] admission to the [illegible] ness. In most [illegible] of the tea plant called [illegible] is used and not the powdered leaf [illegible] Powdered tea, matcha, is usually used only in the houses of nobles and of the rich.

A ceremonious system of drinking tea has existed in Japan from very ancient times. A gathering of friends is held in a certain small room of the house, known as [illegible], in which ground or powdered tea is served to them. This room is called sukiya, and is generally detached from the dwelling house. Outside and about the room curious and valuable stones and plants are arranged, and inside old tea utensils are displayed, also old scroll pictures and other antiques. At the time of a gathering various kinds of prepared dishes are placed on low stands before each guest. The host himself prepares koicha, thick tea, in the presence of his guests, and one cup of it is passed to all the guests, always five, to be taken in turn, after which [illegible] tea is handed to them.

The great point about this tea room is not that it be gaudily decorated, but that it be neat and thoroughly clean. The process of making tea for every day use does not differ materially from that adopted in this country, but in the matter of ceremonious tea drinking it is necessary that great attention be paid to the selection and preservation of tea, the selection of the water, the arrangement of the utensils, observation of the temperature of the water, and care in the washing of the utensils.

Some Points of the Skin.

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

Blix, of Upsala, and Eulenberg, of Berlin, have observed that there are definite points on the skin at which sensations of cold only are aroused; others, distinct from the first and equally definite, for the sensation of heat, while between the two sets of spots sensations of pressure only are aroused.

Donaldson, an American experimenter, has tried to make accurate maps of the spots of temperature sensation, and has found that their distribution differs on different individuals, that the spots for cold are more numerous than those for heat, while the latter are the more sensitive, and that the spots are mostly less than one twentieth of an inch in diameter.

Have I a Chance.

[Exchange.]

A call has been made to The London Field by a fair equestrienne for some sort of a folding rope ladder contrivance by which she can mount herself when left to the mercy of "a feeble parlor maid, a clumsy groom or gardener, or a low kitchen chair." Such a thing is just as much needed in America. So here is a chance for an ingenious mind.

The "Only True Umbrella."

[Chicago Herald.]

In an address at the Louisville university the late Dr. Yandell is quoted as recommending a habit of cheerfulness, "A wide-spreading, hopeful disposition," he would say, "is your only true umbrella in this vale of tears."

HIS QUICK TEMPER.

[Youth's Companion.]

"You are serious this evening," said Mrs. Landell to her husband. "I hope nothing has gone wrong during the day."

Mr. Landell, who had been sitting with his eyes upon the floor, silent and abstracted for some minutes, roused himself at these words, and looking up at his wife smiled, as he answered: "Oh, no; nothing has gone wrong."

"Don't you feel well?" The voice of Mrs. Landell was just shaded with concern.

"Well enough in body, but not so comfortable in mind as I desire."

"Then something has gone wrong?" she said.

Her manner was slightly troubled.

"Nothing more than usual," Mr. Landell replied.

The faint smile had faded from his countenance.

Mrs. Landell sighed.

"Than usual!" she repeated his words, looking with earnest inquiry into her husband's face. Then she added, tenderly, "Bring home your trouble, dear. Don't hide anything. Let me share with you all the good and ill of life. Hearts draw nearer in suffering than they do in joy."

"I bless your kind heart, Alice," said Mr. Landell, a broad smile sweeping over his face, as he caught her round cheeks in her hands and kissed her. "There isn't anything in the case so serious as that comes to. I'm not going to ruin in business; haven't lost anything worth speaking about; haven't cheated anybody, and don't intend doing so. It's only this hasty impulsive temper of mine that is all the while leading me to do or say something that [illegible] sting."

The cloud passed from the face of Mrs. Landell.

"You will overcome that in time, Edward," said she encouragingly.

"I can't see that I make any progress. Yesterday I spoke sharply to one of my young men, when a mild reproof would have been better and of more salutary effect. He is sensitive, and my words hurt him severely. The shadow that remained on his face all day was my perpetual rebuke, and I felt it long after the sun went down. My punishment was greater than his. But the lesson of yesterday did not suffice. This morning I was again betrayed into captious language, that wounded the same young man, and threw him so much off his guard, that he answered me back, with some feeling. This I regarded as impertinence, and threatened to dismiss him from my service if he dared venture a repetition of the language. When feeling cooled, and thought became clear again, I saw that I had been wrong, and done wrong. And I have felt unhappy about it ever since. I wish that I had more self-control, that I could rule my tongue when feeling is suddenly stirred. But temperament and long indulged habits are both against me."

Mrs. Landell encouraged and soothed her husband, and so won his mind away from its brooding self reproaches.

On the next morning as Mr. Landell was about leaving for his warehouse, his wife looked up at him, and, with a meaning smile, said, "Don't."

There was not the slightest perceptible warning in her tone.

"Don't what?"

Mr. Landell seemed a little puzzled.

"Don't forget yourself."

"Oh!" Light broke in upon his mind. "Thank you. I will not."

And he went forth to meet the trials of the day.

Almost the first thing that fell under the notice of Mr. Landell was an important letter, which, after writing, he had given to the clerk to copy and post. Instead of being where it should have been, it lay upon his desk. Neglect like that he felt to be unpardonable.

"John!"

He called sharply to a young man at the farther end of the warehouse.

"Don't!" It seemed like the voice of his wife in his ears. "Don't forget yourself."

This mental warning came just in season. The clerk came quickly toward him. By the time he reached the desk Mr. Landell the latter was under self-control.

"Why was not this letter posted, John?" The tone was neither imperative nor captious, but kind, and the question asked in a way that said, "Of course there is a good reason for the omission."

And so there was.

"I think, sir," answered John, "that there is a mistake, and I thought it best not to put the letter in the post."

"A mistake! How?"

And Mr. Landell opened the letter.

"It reads," said the clerk, "300 cases of goods."

"Oh, no—thirty cases," replied Mr. Landell. But as he said thirty his eyes rested on 300. "So it is. How could I have made such an error. You were right, John, in not sending the letter away."

The clerk went back to his place, and the merchant said to himself, "How glad I am that I was able to control myself! If I had spoken to that young man as I felt, I would have wronged and alienated him, and made trouble for myself all day."

Not long after this a case of goods fell through one of the hatchways, crashing down upon the landing with a noise that caused Mr. Landell, whose temperament was exceedingly nervous, to spring to his feet. To blame some one was his first impulse.

"That careless fellow has done this!" was on his tongue.

"Don't!"

The inward monitor spoke in time. Mr. Landell shut his lips tightly and kept silent until he could command himself. He then calmly inquired into the cause of the accident, and found that special blame attached to no one. On examining the case of goods the damage was found to be trifling.

"Another conquest," said Mr. Landell, as he went back to his desk. "Self-control is easy enough, if the trial be made in earnest."

A dozen times that day was the torch applied to Mr. Landell's quick temper, and as often was he in danger of blazing out. But he had begun right, and he kept right until the sun went down.

And then he turned his step homeward, feeling more comfortable in mind than he had felt for many weeks. There was no shadow on his countenance when he met his wife, but smiling good humor.

"You said 'Don't' as I left you this morning."

"Well?"

"And I didn't."

"You are a hero," said Mrs. Landell, laughing.

"Not much of a one. The conquest was easy enough when I drew the sword in earnest."

"And you feel better?"

"Oh, a thousand times! What a curse of one's life this quick temper is! I am ashamed of myself half a dozen times a day on an average. But I have made a good beginning, and mean to keep on right until the end."

"Don't," said Mrs. Landell to her husband, as she parted with him at the front door on the next morning.

"I won't," was the hearty answer.

And he didn't, as the pleasant evening he passed with his wife at its close most clearly testified.

LIVINGSTONE IN AFRICA.

Faithfulness of a Follower—His Lack of Stern Discipline—After Death.

[New York Sun.]

Livingstone might have lived to follow the Congo to the sea had it not been for the faithlessness of one of his black followers. This man deserted his master in the heart of Africa, taking with him a box Livingstone had committed to his care. The box contained every particle of medicine the explorer possessed, and he wrote in his diary that he thought his fate was sealed when he found himself in a fever-stricken country without a grain of quinine. Left without resources for warding off disease, the great, simple minded man soon lost his strength and perished on the southern shores of Lake Bangweolo. Explorers took warning by his experience, and the medical supplies are now always distributed in different packages, so that all cannot be lost by the treachery of one man.

Livingstone without doubt would have accomplished much more if he had more sternly disciplined his followers. He was too gentle, and the faithless members of his party never got their deserts. They knew they could leave him with impunity, and sometimes he was at a standstill for months for lack of porters to carry his goods. Stanley, on the other hand, believed he could not perform satisfactory service unless he kept his force intact. If any of his men deserted, the caravan halted until the deserters were brought back to camp. Many people in New York remember Kalulu, a young African whom Stanley brought here with him. Kalulu returned to the dark continent with the explorer, and after the party had crossed Lake Tanganyika he suddenly disappeared. Search parties scoured the country until they found him, and he was brought back to camp. He was very penitent and served Stanley faithfully thereafter, until he was drowned in the cataracts of the lower Congo, when they were near the end of their eventful journey.

If the faithless among his people involved Livingstone in great trouble, the conduct of those who were true to him makes one of the brightest chapters in the history of African exploration. How tenderly and thoughtfully the remnant of his followers attended their loved master's wants in the last weary months of his wanderings. The devotion and fidelity of Chuma and Susi were sublime. Livingstone expected to be buried where he fell, but his faithful blacks risked their lives to restore his body to his friends. They buried his heart in the land he loved so well, embalmed his body in their rude way, and, pretending that it was a package of merchandise, bore it through a thousand miles of forest and jungle to the sea coast. In Ugogo and other large districts through which they traveled, the people believed that the passage of a dead body through their land would bring the direst disasters upon them, and the little caravan would have been put to death if their secret had been discovered. Each member of the caravan received handsome presents from England in recognition of his services, and Chuma and Susi were especially honored.

Exploration of the Great Pyramid.

[J. B. Bailey in St. James' Gazette.]

Now that Great Britain is dominant at Cairo, would it not be a good plan to clear away the sand and rubbish from the base of the great pyramid right down to its rocky foundation, and try to discover those vast corridors, halls and temple, containing priceless curiosities and treasures, with which tradition in all ages has credited the great pyramid. This wonderful building, of such exquisite workmanship, was erected many years before any of the other pyramids, which are only humble imitations, built by another nation, and also for other purposes, for neither King Cheops nor anybody else was ever interred beneath this mighty mass of stone. The smaller pyramids also exhibit neither the nicety of proportion nor the exactness of measurement, both of which characterize the first pyramid.

From internal evidence it seems to have been built about the year 2170 B. C., a short time before the birth of Abraham, more than 4,000 years ago. Thus, one of the seven wonders of the world in the days of ancient Greece—is the only one of them still in existence. The base of this building covers more than thirteen square acres of ground. Its four sides face exactly north, south, east and west. It is situated in the geographical center of the land surface of the globe. It was originally 485 feet high, and each of its sides measures 762 feet. It is computed to contain 5,000,000 tons of hewn stones beautifully fitted together with a mere film of cement. And these immense blocks of stone must have been brought from quarries 500 miles distant from the site of the building. The present well known king and queen chambers, with the various passages, might also be thoroughly illumined by means of the electric or lime lights.

The astronomer royal of Scotland some years since carefully and laboriously examined all that is at present known of the interior of this enormous building. He states that measurements in the chambers, etc., show the exact length of the cubit of the Bible—namely, twenty five inches. This cubit was used in the building of Noah's ark, Solomon's temple, etc. He also maintains that the pyramid shows the distance of the sun from the earth to be 91,840,000 miles.

Curious Facts About Candles.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]

It is a curious fact that candles denote both a low and a high state of society. There was a time in England when lamps were entirely out of use in the houses of the wealthy, and candles were burned as luxuries, and at the present time no British nobleman invites his guests to table where the illumination is by anything less expensive than wax candles, and the queen has never given a drawing-room where either lamp-light or gas-light was used, only wax candles must shine. On the altars of churches none but lights made from vegetable wax and vegetable oil are ever used. The reason given for their use at drawing-rooms and large entertainments is that the light is more becoming to the ladies, but in the cottage, where complexions have no value, the candle is used as more economical than the lamp; so extremes meet.

Use of Tropical Fruits.

[Exchange.]

One of the best evidences that the American people of this generation live better than their fathers did is found in the steady and rapid growth of the trade in tropical fruits. It is not many years since the great majority of people scarcely knew what a banana was, and considered oranges and lemons as luxuries to be afforded only in sickness or on great occasions. Now, not only these, but other tropical fruits, are bought and eaten almost as generally and freely as apples, and the consumption of melons, peaches, pears, plums, and berries, is on the same universal and extensive scale. This is a change which tends to gratify the taste, and to promote health which is the foundation of human happiness, and is of advantage to everybody.

Hatching Teeth.

[Harper's Bazar.]

"What is the matter with the baby?" asked a lady of a little girl, whose baby brother she had understood to be ailing.

"Oh, nothin' much," was the answer. "He's only hatchin' teeth."

THE HARMONISTS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Career and Operations of the Peculiar Community—Dying Out.

[Youngstown (Ohio) Cor. Chicago Herald.]

There has always centered about the sect of Harmonists a halo of interest because of their peculiarities and seclusive tendencies. The founder of this rich colony, located at Economy, on the banks of the Beaver river, was George Rapp, who was born in Wurtemburg in 1770. Believing he had a divine call and was charged with a restoration of the Christian religion to its original purity, he organized a colony on the model of the primitive church, with goods and chattels in common. This soon involved him and his followers in trouble with his government, and compelled him to transplant the community, in 1803, to the United States. They settled first on the Connequenessing creek, in Butler county, where they found ed the village of Harmony and employed themselves in agriculture and manufacture. By industry and thrift they acquired considerable wealth and in 1815 they removed in a body to Indiana, where they purchased and located upon 27,000 acres of land along the banks of the Wabash river.

The settlement of New Harmony was even more prosperous than the first had been, but the climate was not satisfactory, and in 1824, after numerous councils, they sold out and moved back to Pennsylvania, this time locating in Beaver county, on the right bank of the Ohio river, where they purchased 3,500 acres of beautiful farming lands and where they soon afterward laid out the town of Economy. Here is where they are located at present, surrounded by peace and plenty. They are a strange people—do not believe in marriage, but all live together as brothers and sisters and practice the strictest morality.

In 1832 the question of marriage was the leading one in the community and about 200 members withdrew because they favored marriages and established the town of Phillipsburg, but the new colony did not prosper, and after a few years struggling they sold out and disbanded, dividing the proceeds of their sales equally among all the members. In the meantime the Harmonists were gradually becoming more and more wealthy, until at present they own jointly and in common lands, stocks, bonds and herds, the value of which is estimated at $35,000,000. Besides owning all of Economy and a large part of Beaver, they own an entire county in Dakota, in the valley of the Red River of the North.

Out of their surplus moneys they built and equipped the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad, running through a rich and fertile country from Pittsburg to Youngstown, and owned the controlling interest in it until the road was sold to the Vanderbilts. It is said that on this deal alone they made 75 per cent. on their investment, as the road turned out to be one of the best-paying lines in the country. It is a matter of history that at the time the war broke out, in 1861, they converted all their lands and available property into money and burned it, using the treasure afterwards in paying for the building of the railroad. The payments thus made put in circulation an immense amount of silver, many of the pieces dating back to 1800.

Owing to the law prohibiting marriage the sect has gradually diminished until at present it consists of only thirteen men and forty women, all of them well advanced in years. They employ over 300 servants and farm hands, and these, with their families, make quite a village. Everything is owned in common. The grocer, the baker, the butcher and the milkman go the rounds every day and supply the different families with the necessities and a few of the luxuries of life. Nothing can be bought in the village of Economy, and it is probably the only town in the world where a man cannot, even if he desires, spend money. They are extremely liberal and philanthropic, and are constantly doing acts of benevolence. Their houses, which are all exactly alike, are an equal distance apart and are at a uniform distance from the village street. They are painted pure white and have no front doors, claiming that if they had these conveniences the women folks would spend too much time looking at and gossiping with passers by.

A good story is related in this connection that the president of the community a score of years ago imagined that there was too much familiarity between the young men and maidens, and so promulgated an order that all females appearing on the street after dark must carry lanterns, but still the merry making continued, although no lanterns appeared. This caused an investigation which developed the fact that the worthy old gentleman had neglected to order that the lanterns should be lighted.

As stated, there are now only thirteen men and forty women left of the once large colony, and they being old it is likely that the law against celibacy will cause the extermination of the colony in a few years more. According to their laws, as long as three of them hold together the property is to remain intact but when one of the final trio dies the other two lose all right to the property and must leave. As there are no heirs the $35,000,000 which they possess in real and personal property will come into the possession of the state of Pennsylvania, and will form a handsome legacy.

Pictures on Short Notice.

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

People wonder how some of the daily papers continue to furnish the illustrations of events which occurred only a few hours before going to press. The process is very simple. The artist with a metal stylus draws a sketch on a preparation of plaster of Paris. From this a stereotype plate is made direct. The plate is placed on a metal base and locked in the forms with the type. With this rapid process the artist can make his sketch while the reporter is writing his account of the matter.

The Third in Cost.

[New York Letter.]

It is said that the third costliest building in the world is the New York state capitol. Started under a legislative limitation of $4,000,000, it has already cost nearly $18,000,000, or more than the national capitol building at Washington. Six or seven millions more will be required to finish it.

The Electricity of Rain.

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

The suggestion having been made that the ignition of petroleum tanks may sometimes be caused by sparks from the rain of thunder clouds, some interesting results obtained with an old piece of apparatus have been called to mind.

In these experiments an electrometer showed that the drops of occasional showers are almost always more or less charged with electricity, and that it is only totally absent during foggy, moist days, and long storms. The strongest charges were obtained during thunder-storms; but the air even has given indications occasionally of an electric charge without any fall of rain.

In a Fashionable Cemetery.

[The Current.]

When a man dies and enters into his estate in a fashionable cemetery, he must needs lie in his cerements according to the card in the office at the gates, where they toll the bell. Monuments are no longer erected to the dead; they are erected to the landscape gardener. To have a great man (height of monument of great man, seventy-five feet) every two rods—that is the glory which remains to the successful citizen.

ANCIENT AND MODERN PERU.

The Grandeur of the Inca Empire—The Misery of To-Day.

[Lima Cor. Inter Ocean.]

The Peruvian army is made up mostly of Indians and Cholos (as the mixed races are called), and are brought in from the mountains tied with ropes. A train-load of these "volunteers" came in from the country the other day, all of them with their hands tied behind them, and were driven into a corral, like so many cattle, where they were given uniforms and guns and put through a course of sprouts. It is of little interest to the Indian on which side he fights, for he knows nothing about the political troubles of the country, and serves any commander who happens to capture him, like a mule or a horse, until he is shot or runs away. They are obedient, tractable, and enduring, and although those who know enough will cut off hands and feet to avoid service in the army, their mutinies always originate with the officers, who are Spanish.

Robertson in his History of America asserts that 40,000,000 of people were slain in the conquest of Peru. While it is difficult to believe that this is not an exaggeration, it is nevertheless true that the mere handful of Indians that remain represent a race which, at the time Pizarro came, was as dense as the population of China. We can see, even now, that the country was covered with towns and villages, who were compelled to bury their dead in the sands, and build houses upon the rocks in order to utilize every inch of soil for agriculture. The struggle the Indians had to sustain themselves is illustrated on every mountain side, where they built terraces and scratched the earth out of the crevices of the rocks to plant a few grains of corn; and in every desert where great basins were excavated in the sand and filled with guano from the islands of the sea to make them fertile. Their cemeteries contain millions of bodies—mummies, which are found today in a perfect state of preservation, and teach a lesson of civilization which has been and passed away, superior in its age to that of any prehistoric race.

No man can see Peru without wondering at the grandeur, the extent, the industry, and the intelligence of the Inca empire. They had arts which the world has forgotten; knowledge which the world never knew, that which their conquerors could never imitate, and wealth which made them the prey of every adventurer of the sixteenth century. Their temples and palaces were built of hewn stone from quarries that the Spaniards have not been able to discover, and the means by which they lifted blocks of granite weighing hundreds of tons is a problem no antiquarian has been able to solve. They knew how to harden copper until it had an edge as keen and enduring as the finest of modern steel, they made ornaments of gold and silver, and cut jewels as skillfully as the lapidaries of to day, and their fabrics of woolen and cotton are spun and woven as smoothly as modern looms can make. They surpassed modern civilization in many things, and had a system of government under which millions of people lived and labored as a single family, with everything in common, knowing all arts but those of war, and worshiping a deity whose attributes were almost parallel to those of the Christian God.

Hemmed in on one side by the impassable snows of the Andes, and on the other by a desert, lifted above the rest of a world unknown to them, in spirit as well as fact, as peaceful and calm as the Andean stars, they established a system of civilization in which, for the first time since creation, the equal rights of every human being were recognized and observed. The great sea beating incessantly against their desolate coast was recognized by them as a symbol of the infinite, the omnipotence, whose force and majesty their simple logic could not comprehend; while the sun, whose heat and light made existence possible, was recognized as the source of all good. Hence these two elements, the sun and the ocean, were personified and were the objects of the Incas' worship.

All their grandeur, all their wealth, the results of all their industry and accumulation, were swept away by a handful of Spaniards, and finally life itself surrendered, and the race of Incas was so nearly exterminated that Chinese coolies were introduced here, as the negroes were introduced into the West Indies, to do the work of slaves.

A Dusky Congo Queen.

[Harper's Bazar.]

On the Kwa, a deep, rapid tributary of the Congo, is a native town called Itusye, the residence of Queen Gankabi, where Mr. Stanley, while exploring the river, stopped to pay a visit to its feminine ruler. The arrival of the "smoke boats" created a great commotion in the village. Unfortunately Gankabi was not at home; she had gone up the river, and the natives were afraid to receive the strangers in her absence. As the party steamed away, with the avowed intention of finding her royal highness, Stanley was entreated not to frighten the poor queen with the great paddle-wheels.

Frighten her, indeed! A canoe soon came in view in which was seated a female, paddling vigorously for a few strokes, and then in a peculiar style bringing her right arm akimbo to her waist. "Without the slightest sign of timidity she steered her forty-five-foot canoe alongside. This very action on her part denoted a person of character. She brought her paddle in-board, and with her right arm to her waist, she examined us keenly and attentively for some minutes without speaking. Excepting her hair and color, she had nothing negroish about her. Draw a figure with the Martha Washington type of face, color it with rich bronze, put short frizzy hair of a negro above, and one has a striking likeness of Queen Gankabi."

This Amazon, sturdy and square-shouldered, stood, with bare feet, fully five feet seven inches in height. Her costume was an ample grass-cloth folded about her substantial form, and her wrists were adorned with heavy copper bands. Resolute and earnest-eyed, this woman showed neither terror nor astonishment at the "smoke-boat" and its crew, but at once issued commands with the air of one accustomed to be obeyed. Mr. Stanley's interview with this dusky queen is one of the most amusing incidents in his fascinating book.

An Itemized Account.

[Texas Siftings.]

Malvina, the colored "cook lady" of a white Austin family, insisted on handing in every day an itemized account of her expenditures at the market, and here is a sample memorandum:

One 5-cent soop bone—10 cents.

Two 10-scent loves of bred — 30 scentees.

A quarters wuff of termatersee—30 cents.

Which makes one dollar and 5teen sceutees.

And her mistress—we mean the "white woman who hires her"—only gave her $1. Malvina asked for the other 15 cents.

The Pyramid of Cholula.

The production of cotton seed oil has grown in the last ten years from 2,450,000 gallons to 24,000,000.

THE RED PRINCE.

The Effect of His Advent Upon the Field of Battle.

[Cor. London News.]

The first time I ever saw Prince Frederick Charles was on the afternoon of the battle of Mars la Tour. About noon on that bloody day Bazaine out there in front of the auberge of Gravelotte, had bidden adieu to his master, the emperor, and had ridden forward on to the great plain on whose face lie the villages of Flavigny, Vionville, Mars la Tour, and Rezonville, to find that the Prussians were standing athwart the plateau blocking the onward march of his army toward Verdun, that indeed hours before Alvensleben had bidden Plonbaben commence the offensive with his Brandenburger horsemen. For five hours a desperate battle had been raging furiously. Alvensleben had been indeed true to his duty. With his single army corps during those dreadful hours of fighting and slaughter, he had been barring the progress of the whole French army.

Five and twenty thousand Germans, out there mostly on the bare plain, had given pause to 100,000 Frenchmen. But at what a cost! Alvensleben's two divisions, Stulpnagel's and Buddenbrock's, had lost one-third of their strength. The infantry had been so pressed that he had been forced to adopt the terrible expedient of hurling cavalry at the muzzles of the chassepots. From Bredow's gallant horsemen he had not asked too much; they had achieved their mission; they had pierced line after line of French infantry, and had sabered the gunners of the batteries behind; but they had ridden back into their positions short by one-half of the strength with which they had commenced their heroic charge. The village of Flavigny was a shamble, its gutters running blood. The plain around it was strewn thick with dead and wounded. Well might Alvensleben with anxious eyes scan the verge of the plateau for reinforcements, for he was engaged up to the hilt—not a man stood in reserve. He was holding on grimly, but it was with the grip almost of despair.

At the head of the ravine up which the road winds from Gorze down in the valley on to Flavigny up there on the plateau, I lay among the brushwood watching the lurid scene. Suddenly behind me on the steep ascent of the road I heard the clatter of many troops. A cavalcade was approaching at a hard gallop, but in the front alone rode a square-shouldered chief in a red tunic, sitting the big bay with a firm easy seat. His strong-lined face was intent, yet calm; he spoke over his shoulder to the man riding on his flank. It was Prince Frederick Charles at the head of his staff, who had ridden up from Mont-a-Mousson, following his own maxim of moving direct upon the cannon thunder. Out on to the bare plateau he rode, among the whistling bullets and the bursting shells, and as if by instinct galloped straight for the knoll behind Flavigny, where Alvensleben stood in the fire surrounded by what remained of his staff.

It was strange, but as if by the advent of this one man the face of the battle magically changed. Broken troops fell into order and began to push forward. The batteries massed and concentrated their fire on points where it told. Reinforcements he had ordered as he had ridden forward came hurrying on to the plateau, and joined in the fight, cheering as they deployed and opened fire. Le Bœuf had been pressing down from the northward, and threatening Alvensleben's flank, but now Kraatz-Koschlau's battalions were available to confront him, and when they had been too severely punished to maintain their position a headlong cavalry charge crumpled up the head of Le Bœuf's attack. The sun went down on a field retrieved for the Germans by the cool, skillful generalship of Prince Frederick Charles. In the twilight he swept his front clear by the charge of a cavalry division in line, and then the wearied soldiers were able to take up their bivouacs.

College and Non-College Men.

[The Argonaut.]

Making a list hastily of well-known authors, setting their names down as they occur, it appears that Irving, Poe, Cooper, and Whittier are almost the only names of men of the first rank who did not have a collegiate education. Bryant began a college course, but was compelled to discontinue it. Longfellow, Hawthorne, Holmes, Emerson, Thoreau, Willis, Prescott, Bancroft, Motley, the two Danas, were all college men.

In taking men of the later generation, and recognizing the conspicuous rather than the eminent as a basis for judgment, the college men are, Parkman, Warner, Lodge, Fiske, various Adamses, Hale, Higginson, White, Story, Cranch, Scudder, Leland, De Forest, Curtis, Norton, Clarke, Lindsey, Stedman offsets Bryant as a link between the two classes. Of non-college men a larger number may readily be named—Walt Whitman, Whipple, Trowbridge, Fields, Parton, Stoddard, Bayard Taylor, Eggleston, Hart, Howells, James, Aldrich, Lathrop, Stockton, Piatt, Cable, Crawford, Fawcett, Gilder, Harris, Carleton, Mark Twain, Burroughs.

Washington in a New Light.

[McMaster's History.]

"He [Washington] died in his 68th year, and in the heyday of his glory and his fame. Time has since dealt gently with his memory; and he has come down to us as the greatest of all leaders and the most immaculate of all men. No other face is so familiar to us. His name is written all over the map of our country. We have made of his birthday a national feast. The outlines of his biography are known to every schoolboy in the land. Yet his true biography is still to be prepared. Gen. Washington is known to us, and President Washington.

"But George Washington is an unknown man. When at last he is set before us in his habit as he lived, we shall read less of the cherry tree and more of the man. Naught surely that is heroic will be omitted; but side by side with what is heroic will appear much that is commonplace. We shall behold the great commander repairing defeat with marvelous celerity, healing the dissensions of his officers and calming the passions of his mutinous troops. But we shall also hear his oaths, and see him in those terrible outbursts of passion to which Mr. Jefferson has alluded, and one of which Mr. Lear has described. We shall see him refusing to be paid by congress, yet exacting from the family of the poor mason the shilling that was his due. We shall know him as the cold and forbidding character, with whom no fellow-man ever ventured to live on close and familiar terms; we shall respect and honor him for being, not the greatest of generals, nor the wisest of statesmen, not the most saintly of his race, but a man with many human frailties and much common sense, who rose in the fullness of time to be the political deliverer of our country."

The Railroads of Chili.

[Chicago Herald.]

The republic of Chili now owes on account of her railways $22,45,000. In 1883 these railroads earned a revenue of $5,316,049 on a capital of originally less than $50,000,000, and which is now reduced to $22,450,000. Good management and liberality on the part of the government have brought about this splendid financial result.

THE MORUS MULTICAULIS MANIA.

A Day When the People Went Wild Over the Question of "Silk-Culture."

[Harper's Magazine.]

The year 1826 marked the origin of the Morus Multicaulis mania, which raged as a fever from 1830 until it culminated and collapsed in 1839. Congress had referred an inquiry on silk-culture, in 1825, to the committee on agriculture, which, in 1826, reported in favor of its promotion, stating in its report that the imports of silk goods in 1825 were nearly double the imports of breadstuffs—a fact scarcely credible now. The same year Gideon B. Smith, of Baltimore, planted there what is claimed to have been the first Morus Multicaulis tree in America. The secretary of the treasury, Richard Rush, was directed to provide a manual on silk-culture, and the famous "Rush Letter" was accordingly issued in 1828, together with several other treatises, and circulated broadcast. In 1830 an article by a Dr. Pascalis, on the Morus Multicaulis, in The American Journal of Science, directly started the mulberry fever. The Massachusetts legislature in 1831 provided for a manual of silk-culture, which was made by a manufacturer of Dedham, Mr. Cobb, and most of the states began to offer bounties and premiums on trees, cocoons and reeled silk—commonly 10 cents a pound on cocoons and 50 cents on silk.

A report to congress in 1830 proposed a grant of $40,000 to one M. D'Homergue for the establishment of a normal school of filature at Philadelphia, where sixty young men might have gratuitous instruction for two years, and for traveling about the country to teach silk-growing to farmers; and this "silk bill," though defeated in 1832, and reported against as unconstitutional in 1835, would not down till 1837, when still another committee reported as a substitute a scheme to lease public lands without rent for the cultivation of the mulberry tree or the sugar beet.

The whole country now went wild. The fever seemed only to get fresh fuel of excitement from the panic of 1837. Orchards of the Multicaulis were planted in every state; farmers everywhere set their wives and children to feeding worms; multitudinous books, public documents, periodicals on silk-culture constituted the bulk of the reading of the day; stock companies for raising and manufacturing silk sprung up like puff-balls; silk conventions were held, and a United States Silk society was organized.

A thrifty nurseryman on Long Island gave help to the excitement by a canny plan. After selling a considerable supply of the trees to New England dealers, he started off one night by the Providence boat, and with great pretense of eagerness made the rounds of all his customers, excitedly offering 50 cents apiece for trees. Of course he didn't get them, but he presently was able to sell all he had for $1 instead of 50 cents apiece. In Burlington, N. J., over 300,000 trees were raised and sold; in December, 1838, offerings at $1 per tree or per twig were refused at Boston sales, and $5 was sometimes got for trees one season old.

It was satisfactorily proved—again on paper—that an acre of trees was good for $1,030 worth of silk, but the price of trees had no relation to figures, even the most rose-colored. One farmer sold $5,000 worth of trees from three-quarters of an acre. In a single week in Pennsylvania $300,000 worth were sold. In 1839 the bubble burst, and the biters were bitten. Among them was the speculative Long Islander. He had caught the disease which he had profited, and had sent an agent to France with $20,000 to buy 1,000,000 more trees. When they came they were worth a part of a cent apiece for pea-brush.

Some speculators endeavored to get even with fate by shipping a cargo from the east to Indiana by way of New Orleans in an unseaworthy ship heavily insured, but the goods unfortunately reached their destination. Multitudes of men were ruined by the crash. But Americans have a faculty of falling on their feet, and some of the unhappy mulberry growers of the thirties became the successful manufacturers of later days.

The Zuni and the Lemon.

[Frank H. Cushing in the Millstone.]

One feature of Zuni etiquette is rather a tax on the will-power and digestion. It is the desirability of showing your appreciation of the skill and the fare of your hostess by consuming a liberal and relatively equal amount of every article she places in front of you. Goaded on by both their liking for American food and their sense of duty toward a class of hosts they hold in reverent respect, five of the six Indians I brought east in the spring of 1882, suffered, literally, miseries untold, for they rarely complained save to sadly depreciate their own abilities.

"What is it?" exclaimed one of them after a prolonged tussle with the courses of a Palmer house dinner, each one of which he would persist in regarding as a separate meal and eat the desired quota of each article composing it—condiments and all; "what is it in American food, my son, that fills the inside with so much fighting?"

"Would you have me cover my nation with shame?" indignantly asked another, as he reached his hand for a lemon which a generous-minded man on board the train offered him. "What though we be wafted in this swift wagon as on the wings of the wind!" continued he, taking and flourishing the lemon, "is it not a house with many sitters?" He was in the dawn of his hundredth summer and had never, during his long life, tasted a spoonful of acid, save such mild suggestions of it as might have lodged in a green peach or resulted from the fermentation of a meat stew. So I protested, but in vain. He whipped out his hunting knife and severed the lemon. "It must be some kind of a little melon," speculated the old man, as he buried his toothless gums in the major half of it—but the next instant the lemon was rolling on the floor, and he off his seat! He seized his chops with both hands; tears oozed from his close-shut eyes, he wriggled, groaned, hawked, bent over the aisle, retched, heaved—and one of his companions remarked:

"Well, he has covered his nation with shame after all!" But the old man did not hear.

Recreation for London's Poor.

[Leland's London Letter.]

The benevolent of London are running wild on recreation for the poor. The ladies go "slumming," they see girls and youths dirty, hungry, ill-fed and housed, and say forthwith: "What a dismal life—nothing to cheer it—no pleasure; no amusement; let us give them recreation." They see the poor creatures suffering for want of bread, and so propose to give them cake and candy, or penny ices. I believe I know these people as they are, quite as well as their benefactors, and in my opinion it is not recreation that is needed, but higher wages.

The poor girls in the east of London who earn and live upon a shilling a day, count by scores of thousands, and for these recreation is now the cry. Truly if one could double or treble their wages they would find recreation for themselves fast enough, as youth or age generally does without much help when it is fed, washed, clothed, and decently housed.

A new species of tape-worm—mature specimens measuring from three to eight inches in length—has been found in trout.

THE SCANDINAVIAN RACE

[illegible] These three nationalities are three branches of the same race and they have much in common [illegible] manners. They easily understand each other. Their written languages, however, differ one from the other especially the Swedish which is so unlike the other two that the ordinary Swede is unable to read a Norse or Danish book and [illegible]

The Chicago Tribune says "That excellent physical development, habits of industry peaceful disposition, honesty and piety are qualities for which the Swedes are well known throughout the world. Honest, [illegible] loyal and respected wherever they make their settlements, and they are everywhere referred to as models of good and law abiding citizens."

The emigration from the Scandinavian countries to America began in the year 1824 but the great exodus did not begin before 1850. Since the latter year between seven and eight hundred thousand have found their way to the United States and being as the Tribune says a "strong race" they have increased and multiplied rapidly so that the present number can, without exaggeration be estimated at not less than 1,000,000 [illegible] About 85 per cent of these are found in the north west and a majority of them are farmers. A considerable number are engaged as mechanics and sailors.

There are many proofs of the numerical influence of the Scandinavians in the north west. Thus I find that we are represented in Congress by Knute Nelson and that Minnesota and Wisconsin have for many years had Swedish secretaries of state. At this writing [illegible] of Minnesota, [illegible] of Wisconsin 12 of Iowa and 107 of Illinois [illegible] offices are held by Scandinavians. I find them correspondingly well represented in the Legislatures of these States. In Chicago where there [illegible] Swedes among [illegible] county commissioners [illegible] justices of the peace &c. and [illegible] a considerable number of the firemen and policemen are Scandinavians. At the University of Minnesota [illegible] Thousands of Scandinavian bookkeepers and clerks are found in the employ of business men throughout the north west. In the midst of all the Scandinavian settlements doctors, druggists, lawyers &c. of those nationalities have established themselves, many of them doing a large business. I could name Swedish business men whose sales amount to three [illegible] million dollars per annum.

The Scandinavians are by nature an earnest [illegible] and have brought with them across the sea their [illegible]

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The return of the president to Washington will be the signal for an exodus from the watering places by the leaders of society and a number of residents from the West End and Connecticut Avenue have already telegraphed to have their houses in order for immediate occupation. Secretary Manning, who is awaiting Mrs Manning and his daughter [illegible] will retain apartments at the Arlington [illegible] the secretary and his family will spend [illegible] few weeks spent at [illegible] secretary have been [illegible] and he returns to Washington in better health [illegible]

There will be no lack of entertainment [illegible] this winter if appearances are worth anything, and agents of houses [illegible] overrun with applicants who desire immediate possession [illegible] by [illegible] who desire home comforts.

New York and Chicago society will be well represented at the capital this winter as orders have been received from scores of people from these two places for winter accommodations here. Mr and Mrs Leiter will continue to entertain their large circle of friends in the Blaine house on Massachusetts avenue, and will be regarded as the leaders of the Chicago set. On the other hand, Secretary and Mrs. Whitney and Assistant Secretary and Mrs Fairchild will occupy a similar position from a New York point of view.

Washington, Sept 7, 1885. E.

No Wonder.

A [illegible] SUFFERING MENTAL AND PHYSICAL AGONY [illegible] YEARS [illegible] AND HAPPINESS.

Mental agony is dreadful, but when that and physical ailment combine, it is simply terrible. Such was the condition of Geo. W Frampton, of Huntingdon, W. Va., for eight years. He was a sufferer of necrosis—that is, the leg bone at the ankle [illegible] and mortified, which caused running sores. He says: "Pieces of bone [illegible] came out of the sore on my leg. The discharge [illegible] was almost continual, and I was [illegible] to walk. For eight years I have been doctoring. I had been under [illegible] a physician at Newport, [illegible] at Burlington, O. [illegible] years and a doctor [illegible] worked with me for [illegible] did me any [illegible] I finally said my case [illegible] A few months ago I commenced [illegible] Peruna, and now I am [illegible] I can walk as good as anybody, and have perfect use of my limbs."

Mr Alt Lusk, Wooster, Ohio, writes Dr Hartman, Columbus, O.: "I have [illegible] a great sufferer from that dreaded [illegible] chronic catarrh of the stomach. [illegible] I tried your Manalin, and [illegible] did me more [illegible] and ten fold [illegible] the doctors' prescriptions and I [illegible]"

Mr [illegible] P O Elk county, Pa, writes: "I have bought several [illegible] of your Peruna and find it [illegible] of great benefit. I also gave it to some of my friends, they experienced [illegible]"

Mr J. R. Wolken(?), 45 and 47 Ross street, Pittsburgh, Pa, writes: "I am taking Peruna with good results and can [illegible] to all. I have applied [illegible] different drug stores for one [illegible] they claim they have none on hand at present. Please do me the favor to send me one."

[illegible] druggist, Canonsburg, Pa, writes: "I [illegible] your medicine, Peruna. I have sold immense quantities [illegible] it a staple article. I [illegible] customers who think [illegible] for a tonic or [illegible] I recommend [illegible] reliable remedy."

[illegible] Ohio, writes: [illegible] recommending the use [illegible] to any one [illegible] or bronchitis [illegible] I have been for some time [illegible] troubled with a very troublesome cough, [illegible] bottles of Peruna entirely cured [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Only Temperance Bitters Known.

No other medicine known so effectually purifies the blood of deep-seated diseases.

Millions bear testimony to its wonderful curative effects.

It is a purely Vegetable Preparation, made from the native herbs and roots of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol.

It removes the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health.

It is the great Blood Purifier and Life-giving Principle; a Gentle Purgative and Tonic; a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the power of Vinegar Bitters in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to.

The Alterative, Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Sedative, Counter-irritant, Sudorific, Anti-Bilious, Solvent, Diuretic and Tonic properties of Vinegar Bitters exceed those of any other medicine in the world.

No person can take the Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Bilious, Remittent, Intermittent and Malarial Fevers are prevalent throughout the United States, particularly in the valleys of our great rivers and their vast tributaries during the Summer and Autumn, especially during seasons of unusual heat and dryness.

These Fevers are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these organs, is absolutely necessary.

There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. Walker's Vinegar Bitters, as it will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with Vinegar Bitters. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus forearmed.

It invigorates the Stomach and stimulates the torpid Liver and Bowels, cleansing the blood of all impurities, imparting life and vigor to the frame and carrying off without the aid of calomel or other minerals, all poisonous matter from the system. It is easy of administration, prompt in action, and certain in its results.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Pneumonia, Dizziness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart and a hundred other painful symptoms, are at once relieved by Vinegar Bitters.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder the Bitters have no equal. In these as in all constitutional Diseases Walker's Vinegar Bitters has shown its great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the bowels. To guard against this, take occasional doses of Vinegar Bitters.

Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, Swellings, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations, Humors and diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of the Bitters.

Pin, Tape and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like Vinegar Bitters.

Measles, Scarlet Fever, Mumps, Whooping Cough, and all children's diseases may be made less severe by keeping the bowels open with mild doses of the Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, this Bitters has no equal.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood when its impurities burst through the skin in Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul. Your feelings will tell you when, and the health of the system will follow.

In conclusion: Give the Bitters a trial. It will speak for itself. One bottle is a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Around each bottle are full directions printed in different languages.

A Lecture to Young Men On the Loss of MANHOOD

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D.

The world renowned author in this admirable Lecture clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self Abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials; pointing out a mode of treatment at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

You wouldn't think, to look at him, that he'd killed his dozen or more men, would you?" Tenderfoot—"Goodness gracious, no! Has he?" Cowboy—"You bet yer! he's a doctor." Tenderfoot—"Oh, I see."—[Chicago Rambler.

The miscreant who broke a flower pot in the garden of W. J. Colegrove, Esq., one night last week containing a beautiful water-lily plant, ought to be punished, and severely. Such conduct is an outrage on civilization. Circumstantial evidence points strongly to a certain individual as the creature who is [illegible] this vandalism. It is fortunate for him that it is not altogether conclusive.

Mr. Vincent, the owner of the Chautauqua House in this place, could make a vast improvement in that hostelry by [illegible] three or four feet, and using the ground floor in front for about half the length of the building, on one side as an office and on the other as a reading room with a hall between. From the hall a wide stair-way could be made to lead to the ladies' parlor, dining room, etc. This improvement would make of the Chautauqua House one of the finest hotel buildings in Northern Pennsylvania.

We have received a specimen number of the Edition De Luxe, published by Cooper & Conard, the great dry-goods firm of Philadelphia. This is an extra edition of their Fashion Monthly, which will be issued regularly hereafter and furnished subscribers for $1.00 per year. The regular edition will continue to be issued as heretofore at fifty cents per year but without the beautiful colored plates of prevailing fashions, similar to those given in this number which is printed each month in Paris, and furnished only in the Edition De Luxe.

—There has been some trouble in procuring certain fixtures needed for the engine at the Brandt well on the Haskell lease. Everything is now ready, however, and active operations have commenced.

—Jack Beckwith, the deaf and dumb, type-setter, vacated these diggings several days ago. The last seen of him he was in Williamsport in company with a deaf and dumb young lady, traveling in an easterly direction. He will very likely return home a married man.

—A Woman's Relief Corps will be organized at Grand Army Hall in this place on Thursday evening of next week. This organization is auxiliary to the G. A. R., and it is to be hoped that a goodly number of the ladies will be present that evening. It is expected that Mrs. Wallace of Bradford will be present and organize the corps.

The Freeman-Burdick case has occupied the attention of the lawyers this week. They examined witnesses here until Wednesday evening, and Thursday morning the hearing was adjourned to Port Allegany. The hearing was before W. S. Jenkins, a referee appointed by the Erie county, N. Y., court, to take testimony here. The parties in the case were represented as follows: Dr. Freeman by Lawyer Wheeler of Buffalo and Backus & Gorton of this place. Burdick by Lawyer Becker of Buffalo and Morrison & Apple of this place.

PERSONAL MENTION.

We would deem it a favor if those having friends visiting in this place would notify us by postal or by leaving a notice at this office.

Rev. [illegible] is visiting friends in Coudersport.

Lou Moore is in Buffalo buying his fall stock.

S. [illegible], of Huntingdon, Indiana, is visiting friends in this place.

Robert King, Esq., and his daughter Rowena, left for Buffalo Thursday morning.

Mrs. John Baker was visiting Mrs. J. K. Odell, of Olean N. Y., the fore part of the week.

Mrs. D. H. Painter, of Coleville, was visiting Miss Ada Brownell, during the fore part of the week.

Jake Lemmler and family, of Eldred, were visiting his brother, Mr. Charles Lemmler, over Sunday.

F. N. Taylor, the popular host of the Grand Central, has been taking in Buffalo for several days past.

F. R. Arnold and A. J. Hughes of Port Allegany, were in town on Monday both looking and feeling well.

Mrs. Paul Wendel of Colegrove, has been visiting her two daughters and many friends of Olean, this week.

Mrs. H. S. Sartwell and daughters were calling on Port Allegany friends and relatives for a few days last week.

Chas., eldest son of Hon. D. Sterrett left yesterday for Blairstown, N. J., where he will attend school until next June.

Lawyer Wheeler and referee Jenkins were guests at the Wright House part of this week. Lawyer Becker stopped at the Grand Central.

Geo. H. Maddock, Esq., of Boston was stopping at the Grand Central on Monday. He was much pleased with our town and the country around it.

J. H. Snow, Esq., who formerly represented the Gas Co. of Smethport, is in town, looking as fresh as though he had not recently taken unto himself a wife. He will be located at Colegrove hereafter in the employ of the United Pipe Line Company.

To the School Directors of McKean County.

I have long been convinced that some plan should be adopted for supplying schools with supplementary reading, for the double purpose of awakening an interest and imparting beneficial information. A small sum invested by the directors, under the direction of the teachers, would supply this urgent need.

LITTLE CONVENIENCES.

Now that the law has at last been enacted allowing books to be furnished at public expense, directors should be more particular than ever before that every pupil be properly equipped for study, and the teacher should be the judge. No one but a teacher knows, or can know, the endless difficulties caused by a lack of slate pencils, loose paper for impromptu as well as regular work, ink and various other little conveniences that can hardly be enumerated. Especially are those little details serious drawbacks to our country schools which are located far from stores. I would suggest that directors allow their teachers to expend a few cents for the removal of this difficulty. It can safely be done by requiring each teacher to present a bill, and if exorbitant, the board is under no obligation to honor it.

THE LAW.

There is one matter in which it appears that some boards of directors make a mistake: Individual directors employing teachers and opening schools without a vote of the board. In School Laws and Decisions, digests of 1866 and 1882, page 55 section 122, the state superintendent decides as follows: "A teacher may be selected by one member of the board under a special arrangement in the district; but in such case the teacher is not legally employed, until the selection is ratified by the board, and the fact entered on the minutes." These decisions have the force of law until they are reversed by the supreme court, for an act of the legislature makes it one of his, the superintendent's duties to render decisions. It is of the utmost importance that all matters pertaining to schools be done legally, because, at the close of the school year, the affidavit sworn to by the president of the board, affirms that the schools have been open according to the law, and no president can legitimately make such affidavit unless the teachers have been legally employed; upon this affidavit depends the state appropriation.

FINALLY.

Many of the above ideas could be enlarged upon. The number of good schools in McKean county will favorably compare with any other section, yet there is room for improvement and our motto should be "forward," until good grounds and good houses are universally supplied and poor teachers ousted. On some future occasion I will devote a little space to the question of school government.

Respectfully submitted,
M. O. CAMPBELL.

OUR BRADFORD BUDGET.

The controversy between Controller Bishop and Councilman Whitehead through the newspapers, keeps getting warmer, and is attracting a good deal of attention from the tax-payers who are finding out many things in regard to city matters which they did not know before.

Kate McKeown, wife of W. H. McKeown of the Occidental Hotel was found dead in her bed Monday morning. She had been drinking considerable lately and had suddenly broken off, which was probably the cause of her death. Her little child was sleeping with her and in the morning called for a glass of water, all unconscious of the fact that he was sleeping with the corpse of his mother. The nurse coming in with the water soon discovered that she was dead. A coroner's inquest was held as her death was considered suspicious but no new facts were elicited.

The charter members of Company C. gave a banquet to the company last Friday evening at the Oil City Hotel. There are but thirteen of the original members left and their four years term expired that evening. Toasting and speech-making was indulged in to a late hour. Nearly all the old members will re-enlist.

Joe Duffy and Joe Adams, two tough boys were taken to jail last Monday to answer to several charges of theft and robbery. Small burglaries have been rather frequent of late and the police were unable for some time to get any clue to the thieves, but finally became convinced that these two boys were the right ones and arrested them just as they were about to leave for Olean. Young Duffy then gave the whole thing away and confessed to being concerned in the most of the jobs. His parents who are very respectable people offered to fix things up if he would go to school this winter, but this he stoutly refused to do, preferring a sentence to the reform school.

NORWICH NOTES.

Mr. Orlando Gallup was out to church last Sunday.

The sills are laid for the new school house, at Hamlin.

Albe Colegrove is drawing the lumber for N. C. Gallups' new house.

August Ebert is building a new residence on Snow avenue, Lyman & Hines, builders.

J. Colegrove has gone on a trip through the western states, with the intention of visiting Kansas to look after his cattle interests there.

Elder Brown, of Clermont, will preach at Hamlin school house next Sunday at 3 o'clock p. m. His sermon there a week ago last Sunday was well liked.

Orl. Gallup has just returned from Marvin creek where he has been to visit his mother, Mrs. Jabez Gallup, who is dangerously ill with typhoid fever.

The drunken donkey driver who went "up the creek," one day last week, ought to have been arrested for cruelty to animals, and punished to the full extent of the law.

Miss Maggie Wendel of Olean, formerly of this place, left for N. Y. city on Tuesday. She will also visit Rochester, Philadelphia, and several of the principal watering places.

Rev. F. H. Gates is interesting his congregation here with his series of lectures on Joseph. He (Rev. Gates, not Joseph) has promised to preach here another year and has proffered quite a liberal donation toward purchasing the pulpit for the new church, for which the ladies' aid society tender him their heartfelt thanks.

LITERARY NOTES.

Canoeing is becoming so general a recreation that the account of one of the most venturesome of recent canoe voyages, which Mr. C. Farnham is giving in Harper's Magazine, has an unusual interest. His second "Labrador" paper will be printed in the October issue. "It is a profound experience," says Mr. Farnham, "to visit alone the utter abomination of desolation." The self reliance which comes from solitary battling with wind and wave is a chief boast of the canoeist, but Mr. Farnham seems willing to confess that there may be another side to this delight. "I often had to take my will in both hands," he says, "to prevent demoralization." In the storms of the Gulf of St. Lawrence his daily journey averaged only ten miles. At last he got so far north as to find himself canoeing among icebergs, and his description of the bursting of an iceberg is at first hand. The second paper has a dozen illustrations from sketches which Mr. Farnham brought home.

Sing r Sewing Machine.

In August, 1879, C. A. Wood & Co. commenced the manufacture, in Philadelphia, of the now well known Philadelphia Singer Sewing Machine. At first they only made ten machines a week. Their business has steadily increased, until now they are probably the largest manufacturers of this style of machine in the United States. They do business on a liberal and just basis. They sell a three-drawer, drop leaf, and cover machine for the low price of twenty dollars, including all the extra attachments, and warrant them for three years. They offer to send one to any responsible man or woman, to be tested in their own house two weeks before they pay one cent. This is certainly a fair proposition. They have found this way of doing business more satisfactory than to do as other companies do who charge forty to fifty dollars for machines, and pay agents twenty dollars apiece to sell them. We advise all in want of a machine to send for circular and testimonials. Address C. A. Wood & Co., 17 North Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

An Old Democratic Cane.

During Col. Dunkel's term of Secy. of Internal Affairs, there was left in the office of the Secretary a hickory cane, with a silver plate on the side on which is engraved the words, "cut at the hermitage of Gen. Jackson." On the end of the crook which serves as a handle is a plate on which is engraved, "Gov. Wm. F. Packer to Col. J. R. Eck or Eck," the last letter being difficult to determine. The cane remained in the office nearly two years, and no one claiming it, the writer of this who was then acting as deputy secretary, took charge of it with the intention of advertising it, believing it to be a relic which was highly prized by some old democrat or his family. Owing to the cane having been put away among some rubbish, it was overlooked and lost sight of, until within the past few days. It was undoubtedly presented to some friend of Gov. Packer during his term of office, which ceased a quarter of a century ago.

The five mile skating contest which is to take place at the rink this (Friday) evening, between Fred Boylan and E. B. Hann, both of Coleville, we understand has attracted considerable attention in "sporting circles" of various towns in the country, were the two rivals are known. Hoylan has been in town a couple of days getting acquainted with the floor of our mammoth rink, while Hann we understand is practicing daily at Rew, Rixford and other places. Each have their backers and friends who are ready to "put up stuff" on the result, and no doubt it will prove an interesting and enjoyable time as this rink has ever afforded our citizens. Both are said to be "stayers" and there will be no monkey work. May the best man win the purse of $150. Race commences at nine o'clock p. m.

Use of Turpentine in Diphtheria.

An article in the Ugeskrift for Ledger describes Dr. Vilandt's successful use of oil of turpentine in the treatment and prophylaxis of diphtheria and kindred diseases. He states that he has never seen any of these diseases spread from a sick child to other members of the family when this remedy was employed. His method is to pour from twenty to forty drops of a mixture of equal parts of turpentine and carbolic acid into a kettle of water, which is kept simmering over a slow fire, so that the air of the sick room is constantly impregnated with the odor of these two substances. A favorable influence is also exerted by this means upon the exudation in diphtheria, although it is not at all curative of the disease.

Valuable Real Estate.

PURSUANT TO AN ORDER OF THE Orphan's Court of McKean county, Pennsylvania, there will be sold at public sale on the premises, in Keating township, in said county, on the following described real estate, late of Thomas R. Frisbee, deceased, to-wit:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1885,

1st.—All that certain piece, parcel or tract of land situate in Keating township, McKean county, Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point 49.5 rods south of the northeast corner of lot numbered 132 of the allotment of Keating lands in said township, thence south 64.5 rods, thence south 75½ degrees west 34.7 rods, thence north 13 degrees west 30.5 rods, thence north ½ degree west 18 rods, thence east 6.2 rods, thence south 34½ degrees east 6 rods to the place of beginning, containing 21 75-100 acres more or less, it being part of the same land conveyed to [illegible] A. Frisbee, by Philip Frisbee, by deed dated April 21, 1864, and recorded in deed book "L" pages 464 and 465, and also being 1 [illegible] acres conveyed to Thomas R. Frisbee by John T. Kent and wife, by deed dated June 8th 1878, recorded January 3 1879 in deed book Vol. 2, page 2, records of McKean county, with a large two story frame building used as a store and dwelling house, a good cellar under the whole building, and a two story frame dwelling house nearly new, good orchard and good frame barn, and a good well of water on the premises. This land is cleared and mostly tillable.

2d.—All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in Keating township, McKean county, Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point 31.1 rods north of the northwest corner of lot No. 204 of the allotment of Keating lands in Keating township, thence north 49.9 rods to a point, thence north 71 degrees west 9 rods, thence north 2 degrees east 6.5 rods, thence north 50 degrees east 9 rods, thence south 37 degrees east 10.5 rods, thence north 54 degrees east [illegible] rods, thence east 26.7 rods, thence south 50 degrees west 5 rods, thence south 5½ degrees east 15 rods, thence south 5 degrees east 12.4 rods, and thence south 60 degrees west 77 rods to the place of beginning, containing 16 26-100 acres more or less, it being a part of lot numbered 132 of the Keating allotment of lands aforesaid, and a part of Warrant No. 3094 and a part of the land conveyed to Manville Tuttle by Philip Frisbee and wife, by deed dated January 21, 1865, recorded January 21, 1865 in deed book "M" page 122 and 123. Also another lot and premises, being a certain mill site, on which was formerly situated a saw mill known as the Rice & Moore mill, with the premises and appurtenances attached thereto, with the privilege of joining the dam to the banks of the stream, and the buildings attached thereto, adjoining the Keating lands, being the neck lying in the bend of the creek between the dam and the east line of the lot, situated upon Potato creek in said county of McKean and state of Pennsylvania, being same land conveyed to Roswell Frisbee and Philip Frisbee by George S. McIntosh, by deed dated August 11, 1854, recorded September 21, 1860 in deed book "K" page 34, etc., with a new steam's steam saw mill thereon, with circular saw, gang, edgers, cut-off saws, and everything complete and in running order. This mill which will easily cut forty thousand feet of lumber per day, is connected by a new switch with the B. N. Y. & P. R. R., and is a valuable property. Also a blacksmith shop thereon, four dwelling houses and a boarding house. The dam and water right and privilege appurtenant to this mill as used by the late Thomas R. Frisbee will be sold with the land. Also the interest of said Thomas R. Frisbee in the switch aforesaid. This land will be sold subject to the right of removal of the grist mill that now stands thereon, and also subject to the right to use the water from the race for the purpose of running said mill when placed upon an adjoining lot.

3d.—Also all the undivided one-half of that certain piece or parcel of land situate in Keating township, McKean county, Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point the northwest corner of lot No. 204 of the allotment of Keating lands in Keating township, thence north 31.1 rods, thence north 60 degrees west 77 rods, thence south ½ degree east 50.6 rods and thence east 67.4 rods to the place of beginning, containing 21 12-100 acres of land more or less, being a part of lot No. 132 of the Keating allotment aforesaid and a part of Warrant No. 3094, it being a part of the [illegible] acres conveyed to Manville Tuttle by Philip Frisbee, et. ux., by deed dated January 21, 1865, and recorded January 21, 1865, in deed book "M" pages 122 and 123. Land cleared. No improvements.

4th.—Also a tract or messuage of land situate in Eldred township, McKean county, Pennsylvania, being lot No. 226 of the Keating allotment of lands in Eldred township and a part of Warrant No. 3227, containing 75 1-10 acres of land, strict measure, be the same more or less, being the same land conveyed to Thomas R. Frisbee by Byron D. Hamlin and wife, by deed dated September 13, 1880, recorded September 13, 1880 in deed book Vol. 6, page 66 etc. About one-half of this land is heavily timbered with hemlock. No improvements.

5th.—Also all that certain piece or parcel of land situate in Keating township, McKean county, Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point 40.5 rods west of the northeast corner of lot numbered 132 of the allotment of Keating lands in said township, thence south ½ degree east 14 rods, thence north 56½ degrees west 18 rods, thence north 29 degrees east 5 rods and thence east 12 rods to the place of beginning, containing 129-160 of an acre more or less, it being a part of lot No. 132 of the allotment of Keating lands aforesaid and part of Warrant No. 3094 and a part of the land conveyed to Manville Tuttle by Philip Frisbee and wife, by deed dated January 21, 1865, recorded January 21, 1865 in deed book "M" pages 122 and 123. Together with a grist mill and the right to use the water from the mill race on the adjoining saw mill lot for running said mill, when it is set up on this land.

Terms of Sale—One-third of purchase money on confirmation of sale, the balance in two equal annual installments with legal interest, payable annually on the whole sum. Notice in Divorce.

A. D. No. 370, May Term, 1881.

McKEAN COUNTY, ss.—THE COMMONwealth of Pennsylvania to the sheriff of said county, greeting:

Whereas, Arabella M. Marks by her next friend Dickeson Hall, did, on the 11th day of April 1881, prefer her petition to our said Judges of the said Court of Common Pleas of said county, praying for the causes therein set forth she might be divorced from the bonds of matrimony entered into with you, James L. Marks.

We therefore command you, the said Jas. L. Marks, that setting aside all other business and excuses whatever, you be and appear in your proper person before our Judges at Smethport, at a Court of Common Pleas there to be held for the County of McKean, on the First Monday of Oct. next, to answer the petition or libel of said Arabella M. QUAKER

Is the Best

TABLE SAUCE.

Thousands of articles are now manufactured that in former years had to be imported, paying high import duty as it is now being done on Lea & Perrins' table sauce; the Quaker Table Sauce has taken its place; it has been pronounced by competent judges just as good and even better. The Quaker Sauce has slowly but surely gained great influence and is replacing the very best imported brands on the shelf of the grocer, the tables of the restaurants and the tables of the rich and poor man, greatly praised and relished by all on account of its piquancy, as the taste, strength and pithiness. The inventor has by years of study of the secret virtues contained in the aromatic spices of the Indies and China, such as mace, nutmeg, cinnamon, pimento and cardamom, and peppers and barks of trees so known to the Indian, and by long use in a mixture he succeeded to combine their virtues in such a liquid form as to throw aside it, of agreeable taste, and so invigorating as to be taken in place of stomach bitters. By manufacturing this sauce here, heavy import duties and freights are saved, and it is sold at a lower figure to the dealer, who making a better profit on the sauce can sell it to the consumer cheaper than the very best imported article hardly equals. If your grocer does not keep it, write for prices, etc. Sold in bottles or by the gallon.

Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful, glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

AGRICULTURAL.

Returns From Stock.

A correspondent incidentally observes in the course of a business letter that many farmers hesitate about making proper efforts for the improvement of their cattle because they believe it is impossible to secure in any one animal the very best beef and the very best dairying qualities, and they are undecided which one they can better afford to sacrifice. It is true there may be here some occasion for indecision, but it should not take any bright farmer very long to estimate the peculiar surroundings of his position and to make up his mind as to what kind of stock is best for him. And certainly, no matter what difficulties the problem may involve in any special case, there is nothing in it which should make any farmer content, even for a single season, with cattle which have no special advantages for either the stall or dairy. And that is where the difficulty with most farmers will be found: their cattle will neither give milk nor get fat. With these an improvement in any direction will be an improvement in every direction, and even a poor choice for the future will be better than the condition prevailing in the present. This poor stock is an abomination: it eats and gives no commensurate return. The farmer could as well afford to take on a couple of extra hands each summer to spend half their time doing nothing beyond dozing in the shade as to keep around him a lot of unthrifty brutes to eat up the products of the farm and only return in beef or milk half their value. When the farmer takes a load of corn to town he is very particular to interview all the "dealers" and ascertain which one of them will pay the most for it. And he should adopt the same business methods with the great cribs of corn and the great ricks and barns full of hay which he intends to feed on the place, and ask what kind of cattle will make the largest returns and yield the greatest amount of money for all this feed. There is nothing "fancy" about it, only so far as any man's eye is better pleased with the appearance of a sleek, thrifty animal than with an angular, unthrifty one; but it is a plain matter of practical business. The necessity for live stock improvement is merely a necessity to stop a shameful and unnecessary waste. As long as this waste continues it is idle to talk of economy in other directions. The farmer who will economize his crops by feeding them only to such stock as will give the best returns will be under small necessity for the practice of unpleasant economy in the house with the family, on which too many farmers rely in order to keep expenditures within the income.—Breeders' Gazette.

Live Well.

The farmer can be the very best liver in the land just as easily as not, and he should be. He has his choice of the world's produce. He holds a first mortgage on the herds and flocks. The crops and fruits of the earth are his to begin with and he should fare sumptuously every day. Why not? He will be all the better man and better farmer for it, and it is his duty as well as privilege. The only reason that he does not is that he has permitted himself and his family to get into a rut of beef and cabbage, pork and potatoes, that he finds it difficult to get out of. This is all wrong from every point of view. He should get out, he must get out, if he would make the most of himself and family, and now is the time to make a beginning. Here is spring with all its gardening opportunities. Improve them. Enlarge the boundaries of the garden, and enlarge your ideas of gardening at the same time. Plant with liberal ideas, and plant with a liberal hand. Is the old garden cramped? Turn it over to the women for their herbs and a "posy bed," and go out to the nearest side of the corn field, and make a garden big enough in which to spread yourself. Make the rows as long as the field is wide, and as far apart as will admit your cultivator or horse-shoe, and some to spare, and in them plant something besides onions and cabbage. Take the catalogue of the best seedsman you know, and let the whole list of vegetables, from artichokes to turnips, be represented by one or two of the best sorts. Plant every third row with some one of the "small fruits," giving it an extra share of space. Now give this side of the corn field a little extra attention during the season. Let it be the first when you begin to "cultivate," the last when you finish up. You will never miss the time, and you will live better than you have ever lived before.—Our Country Home.

The temperature of cream, when put into the churn should be 52 to 58 degrees, and this will rise to 58 degrees when butter comes. At a higher temperature the butter will be white and inferior. When the entire milk is churned it must be of a higher temperature than cream when churning commences, say 8 or 10 degrees higher. Rapid churning also injures the quality of the butter, overchurning is also prejudicial, the best medium will be found to be when the churning, regularly carried on, takes from one half hour to one hour to produce butter. Cream must also be sour, or well ripened, in order to produce the desired quantity and quality of the butter.

Temperature exercises very considerable influence, not only on the quantity of butter produced, but also on its quality. During hot summer weather the cream will gather more quickly than in winter, and the butter, whilst richer, will be softer. Again, in cold weather it will be often almost impossible under ordinary circumstances to produce butter. Lowering the temperature of the dairy in summer will therefore, retard somewhat the formation of the cream, but it will render the butter firmer, and, again increasing the temperature during cold weather will have the effect of causing the butter to come quicker and be of a better quality.

The average quantity of milk required to produce one quart of cream is 12.20 quarts, the lowest range being 8 quarts, and the highest 15 quarts. The average quantity of butter from one quart of cream is 15.06 ounces, the lowest range in this case being 5 ounces and the highest 22 ounces.—Boston Globe.

Common Sense and Truth About Florida.

In these days of gushing nonsense on the one hand, and of are-headed complaining on the other, it is a hard matter for one seeking information about Florida, with a view to profiting himself, to get what he wants. In talking to a man seeking information about a new country with a view to going there, it comes in very well to mention the beautiful flowers, and moonlight drives and seashore promenades, as a secondary consideration, all this does very well to think about on rest days, but the showing up, in a visible and tangible shape, of the resources of the state and of localities, and the present and future means of making money and founding a safe, healthy and comfortable home. I am a Floridian—a "Cracker" if you will have it so—have no land for sale, am well acquainted with Florida and know different sections of the state and what those sections produce, so have made up my mind to write up a few short, common sense letters to The South, showing up a few points as they are. Such extreme opinions have been expressed about the soil and water of the state that it is actually impossible to get the truth without coming to see for one's self.

The soil of Florida as a rule is poor and the larger part is very poor. They say that

A little farther now and then
Is relished by the best of men.

Hay [illegible] so, then very truly is a little "fertilizer" needful to all Florida soil. Phosphate rock crops out or comes near the surface over large areas of the state, which makes the soil produce really surprising crops in those localities without fertilizers perhaps, and there are rich spots of hammock lands, as rich as one could wish, for making any of the crops indigenous to the soil and climate. These rich spots of hammock land are as good as the rich lands in most of the northern states, that is for those crops indigenous to Florida. It is nonsense to speak of raising wheat and barley and apples and buckwheat, it cannot be done, that is, practically speaking, experiments have demonstrated the fact. Many come to Florida and, guided by the good judgment in selecting their location, apply themselves to those things which thrive here and become rich, and write back the most ridiculous mixtures of good sense and foolishness, and some one seeing their letters come too, thinking that anything and anywhere will do, makes a poor selection of locality to start with, goes to work cultivating what he has cultivated a thousand miles north of here, and the result is a miserable failure. To sum up and put in a nutshell, I mean to say the visionary and non-practical man, who cannot add two and two together and see that it makes four, ought to stay away from Florida; but to the shrewd, working, common sense man who can see an inch before his nose, and will take things as he finds them and use them to his advantage, and not go to work advertising himself as a crank and wasting his time and money trying to make a tropical country yield the products of a colder clime—to that man Florida will be a good friend, and offer better inducements, perhaps, than any other state in the Union. First the generally poor soil and bad water can be avoided by choice of good locality and a little fertilizer for one and cisterns for the other. As for the resources, some of the most conspicuous are the orange, which needs no comment here, as enough has been written about it, its profits and modes of cultivation, for every one in the country to know all about it. The milling interests probably come next, from the large mills cutting 50,000 feet of lumber per day, to the little orange and vegetable crate mills, taking but two men to run them, and which you find springing up everywhere with their little grist mills and cotton gins attached, and puffing, puffing at one or the other from January to January, and with a beautifully small outlay and expense account. Next probably come the vegetable business, which pays almost unreasonably large profits when the locality and soil are selected with good judgment; but we will not go into details of this now immense business—now at least. Then probably come the long cotton which is the stand by of the old settlers and those new comers who know how to make it, it averages the season round, probably thirty cents per pound, and is a safe crop and keeps the orange men in ready money until the groves come into bearing, when they drop it. With the water powers in the state and plenty of labor and everything produced right here, there is the best opening for large and small cotton factories and canning establishments. Responsible parties will take contracts to furnish pine apples, tomatoes, oysters, peaches, beans, figs, pears, etc., at paying figures to the canning men for one, three and five years. The grape is indigenous and profitable. Most of the leading varieties do well, have few enemies, the Scuppernong for one having not an enemy and being never known to blight: every year the same abundant crop, and by the Germans and other foreigners, who were grape culturists at home, now moving into the state, it is confidently predicted that Florida will rival France as a wine making country. One riding along any of the railroads that have been built more than five years, in any part of the state, from the Florida Southern railroad, between Gainesville and Palatka, south, cannot help but think of Mark Twain's illustration of "homeless France," orange grove and vineyard and village and town until one hardly knows on which side of the train to look to see the prettiest sight. Olive groves, pecan groves and English walnuts are attracting a large share of attention which the orange has been monopolizing.

Palatka and Gainesville are in latitude a little south of Jerusalem, and almost as near the seashore, which is essential to the successful cultivation of the olive, this fruit will rival the orange at no distant day in Florida. But to come again to the immediately paying products of the state, we find poultry raising and hogs. Now hog raising with most who have tried it has proved a failure, because this is no corn state, corn is made here of course but not like they make it out west, and it cannot be made and fed to hogs profitably. I was lately at the farm of Mr. Martin Bishop (a full blooded cracker) living near Williamsburg, and has a most beautiful grove of mulberries, all the varieties, bearing from early spring till late fall, and here his poultry and hogs live and grow fat. The grove is near a Florida swamp, in which the hogs roll and live through the heat of the day, and it is an amusing sight when a breeze springs up and the leaves begin to rustle, to see them come trooping and squealing to get the fresh berries. Little or no corn is fed them through the year, and in October the potato and goober patches soon make them ready for the knife. This keeps meat in the house and meat to sell, and the poultry bring fancy prices in the hotels all the winter, the only trouble is that the supply is never equal to the demand; and besides both of the above there are acres of mulberry leaves for the silk worms, the material at hand for another industry which has not cost one cent, practically speaking, the making of silk, giving profitable employment to the wife and girls and younger boys. But enough for the present. I could lead in a pleasant ramble over the state, pointing out sights instructive and interesting and showing towns and localities teeming with wealth, intensely astir with energy and push, and growing with steadiness and rapidity which Atlanta and Birmingham and the mining towns out west can hardly surpass. We can visit counties which have in from four to ten years increased their taxable property from one to two and three and five and six and a half millions of dollars, and see the modes and causes of such rapid strides, and the industries awakened for future development. Florida is indeed an interesting study from a geological construction, its developments of the past and present and its promise for the future, down to the isolated and self satisfied and much abused Cracker or Sour Orange, as he is now lately called, both being indigenous and to the manor born. But more anon, on the wing. W. W. B.

Winston, Alachua Co., Fla.

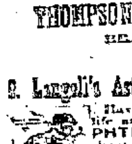
D. Langell's Asthma and Catarrh Remedy.



Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by eminent physicians, [illegible] I was compelled during the last five years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath; my sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE for ASTHMA and CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so that the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Any person not fully satisfied after using one third of a box can return the remainder to the proprietor and the money will be refunded, or send me your address for a trial package FREE OF CHARGE. Mrs. W. T. [illegible], Monroe, Iowa, writes: [illegible] Your Great Remedy completely cured me. I wish all afflicted with Asthma and Catarrh to send for it.
